TIDA is pleased to grant its initial approval of the updated proposed display period of August 17, 2023 until January 28, 2024. Batteries are powering defection from the electric grid

“Minimizing my impact on the planet is something I’ve been working on since I was, like, 13 years old.”

By Jessica Wolfrom Examiner staff writer • May 17, 2022 10:30 am - Updated May 17, 2022 5:09 pm

They call it grid defection.

The first time Barklee Sanders’ power went off, he didn’t think much of it. Before moving to San Francisco’s Treasure Island, he’d lived in Upstate New York and Oklahoma, where harsh weather frequently snuffed out the lights. He had weathered worse storms.

But days later, the power went out again. Within weeks, the rolling darkness became routine.

“When I moved here, I was like, this is not normal,” said Sanders. “But it’s not like you’re notified when you sign a lease. It’s not advertised.”

A view of Treasure Island from Yerba Buena Island in 2019, where power outages have plagued residents for many years. (Kevin N. Hume/The Examiner)

In the last decade, Treasure Island residents have suffered from years of constant blackouts, leaving the island without power for hours. But calls to upgrade the aging electrical infrastructure have largely gone unanswered.

Though the San Francisco Public Utilities Commission and the Treasure Island Development Authority have completed some near-term projects in recent months, including a new switchyard, The City says it can’t fix the problem entirely until the plans for a massive redevelopment of the island are complete — a process that has been decades in the making.

Fed up with incremental solutions, Sanders is working to provide residents with solar and battery storage systems that can keep critical services, including medical devices, running when blackouts occur.

“We’re taking back our power literally,” said Sanders. “We shouldn’t be beholden to a separate entity to have reliable power in a system that doesn’t work.”

But residents of Treasure Island aren’t the only ones looking to solar and battery storage to supplement their power supply. While Sanders wants to defect from the grid due to necessity, others are leaving by choice.

Kathleen Goforth, a resident of San Carlos, recently retrofitted her house to be energy efficient for the climate. She severed her gas line, installed all electric appliances, including her water heater, and has solar panels soaking up the sun on her roof. “Minimizing my impact on the planet is something I’ve been working on since I was like 13 years old,” she said. “It’s kind of a lifelong quest.”

She and her husband installed the panels in 2015, a stretch for them financially, but they were assisted by a state policy that allows residents to be paid for excess solar electricity generated by their panels.

Over the years, they realized they “were not really getting the full benefit of our solar — especially during the summer we produce more than we need,” said Goforth.

Despite generating a glut of power when the sun was up, the residents found themselves drawing from the grid at night. But by adding a battery, they could use what they produced even after the sun went down. “Part of the equation for me is to generate the power as close to where it’s being used as possible and in a way that requires the least amount of additional infrastructure to be developed,” she said.

While Goforth remains connected to the grid, she said her decision to store power was also motivated by what she saw as the writing on the wall: Intensifying wildfire seasons and heat waves that are starting to cause power shut-offs and wreak havoc on the grid, stressing the physical infrastructure while also revving up the demand for energy to power things like air conditioning.

Goforth and Sanders are two examples of how the plunging cost of solar and battery technology are shifting the tectonics of the energy industry from a publicly shared system overseen by utilities to a wild west of independent or community power generation and storage.

And with both energy prices and demand slated to increase as we head into the summer months, more may be lured away. Called grid defection, it’s a trend that Will Gorman, a Ph.D. candidate at the energy and resources group at UC Berkeley, is watching closely.

“I think that defection now is bubbling up as an important point of discussion because with increasing wildfires…PG&E is going to have to spend a lot of money to make their transmission and distribution infrastructure safer – and that’s going to have a big impact on prices,” said Gorman. “As those prices go up, there will be an even stronger incentive to install solar technologies.”

While the rooftop solar industry has exploded in the last decade, “the thing that has now made defection even more tangible is the falling costs of batteries,” said Gorman.

Where in the past “off-grid living” was primarily reserved for the remotely situated or the uber-rich, now even some condo buildings in San Francisco have disconnected using storage.

Since last year, Catherine Von Burg, founder, and CEO of SimpliPhi Power, a technology company that manufactures storage solutions, has seen a 50% increase in the energy storage market. Her company alone is "40% above where we were in the first quarter of last year, so it is growing more and more."

But having a way to store power does not necessarily mean total disconnection. Von Burg's company, which helped former Gov. Jerry Brown go off-grid, also supplies battery technology for people who want to supplement their power.

Former Gov. Jerry Brown with some solar power storage batteries from Simpliphi for his home in Colusa County. (Simpliphi)

"It's not a zero-sum game between top-down, centralized transmission and distribution versus distributed customer-sited generation and storage — it's an 'and' not an 'either-or,'" said Von Burg. "The truth is that the grid and all that infrastructure is an asset. But this asset is old, it's out of date, and it needs to be supported, or integrated with other assets."

Still, experts like Gorman think it's unlikely places like San Francisco will be able to defect from the grid altogether. "The notion that you're going to be able to power The City of San Francisco with all this rooftop (solar), or a lot of distributed energy, I think would be incredibly challenged," he said.

But back on Treasure Island, Sanders says he can't wait around for The City to act. Although he knows it's not a permanent solution, he has managed to get a solar trailer to the island, which allows some people to keep the lights on when darkness descends.

Mayor Breed picks San Francisco police spokesperson Matt Dorsey for District Six supervisor

J.D. Morris, May 9, 2022

Mayor London Breed has appointed police spokesman Matt Dorsey to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors seat vacated by Matt Haney, who joined the state Assembly last week.

Dorsey, 57, has been the San Francisco Police Department's director of strategic communications since January 2020. He previously worked in City Hall as the longtime press secretary for former City Attorney Dennis Herrera.

The appointment immediately elevates Dorsey to one of the city's most closely watched political roles. He has an extensive background in public affairs and has years of experience as a government staffer, but he has never held public office before.
On the Board of Supervisors, he will have to confront some of the city's thorniest and most high-profile issues around homelessness, drug abuse, housing and more. Breed saw Dorsey as a strong ally on the board — where she doesn't always have a reliable majority to back her proposals — as well as the candidate best positioned to address crime, public drug dealing and other street issues that are common in District Six.

But choosing Dorsey is also a risk. He faces what looks to be a competitive November election for the seat and if he loses, it would be the second time in the last few years that a supervisor Breed had appointed lost at the polls. In selecting Dorsey, the mayor passed over Haney's preferred successor, his former chief of staff, Honey Mahogany. Haney had urged Breed to appoint Mahogany to the board after he won the special Assembly election last month.

On Monday, Haney reiterated his support for Mahogany.

"She has worked with residents block by block on homelessness, housing and crime," Haney said. "He's been the spokesperson responsible for spinning the message on behalf of the police ... and Honey has been in the trenches fighting for residents and delivering change. This is the choice."

By tapping a forceful spokesperson for law enforcement, the mayor is signaling her support for an assertive Police Department just before the historic recall election of District Attorney Chesa Boudin. Dorsey has spent the last few years defending the police force from complaints that it solves too few crimes and isn't fully committed to holding officers accountable for abuses.

Dorsey will represent the South of Market, Mission Bay and Treasure Island neighborhoods, but his District Six will be different from the one represented by his predecessor in one very visible way: It no longer includes the Tenderloin due to recent and controversial redistricting decisions.

Breed administered the oath of office to Dorsey shortly before 1 p.m. in a courtyard at the Delancey Street Foundation, which runs drug and alcohol treatment programs, a nod to Dorsey's own journey of recovery.

Before swearing in the new supervisor, the mayor praised him as a symbol of "what recovery can be when we provide the right opportunities for people who are struggling."

"He represents what hope is," Breed said.

Two of Dorsey's former bosses, Herrera and Police Chief Bill Scott, praised him as a trusted strategist and skilled communicator.

"He always puts the city first," Scott said.

Dorsey, in remarks after he was sworn in, said he believes local government plays an "essential role" in providing resources to help people recover from addiction. He said he wants to help the city boost police staffing levels, and he will be a "full partner" with Breed on housing issues.

"Our problems may seem intractable; solutions impossible," Dorsey said. "I am convinced they are neither."

Dorsey told The Chronicle that he will draw on his personal experience with drug abuse to address the raging overdose crisis that has claimed more than 1,000 lives since 2020, many of them in SoMa, where he has lived for well over a decade.

Dorsey described himself as a "three-time drug rehab graduate" who most recently had a "short relapse" during the pandemic when meetings shifted online. He said he has abused crystal meth, GHB, MDMA, Xanax and alcohol in the past.

"For those of us in recovery, seeing our city struggle with a public health calamity that is twice as deadly as COVID-19 and represents something we haven't seen since the AIDS crisis in San Francisco — it's hard to watch," Dorsey said. "I'm also a gay man who is HIV positive. And it isn't lost on me that, like the AIDS crisis, the stigma of who is dying is masking the horror of how many are dying."

Dorsey said he supports the establishment of a supervised drug consumption site along the lines of the facilities New York City recently opened. But he also wants the city to do more to support abstinence-focused programs, which at least two other supervisors are also pushing.

Dorsey also sees a greater role for police in cracking down on public drug dealing, but he stressed that he did not want to be "overly prescriptive" in his policy proposals at this point.

"By any objective measure, it's hard to say that we are holding drug dealers accountable," he said.

Breed considered Mahogany, along with other candidates — including Bilal Mahmood, who recently ran in the state Assembly race against Haney — but ultimately viewed Dorsey as the best pick.

Dorsey will serve the remainder of Haney's term this year and said he plans to seek election for a full four-year term in November.

Mahogany, who rose to prominence during her 2013 stint on the reality competition series "RuPaul's Drag Race," has already said she plans to run in the fall, setting up a political showdown with Dorsey. If elected, Mahogany would be the city's first transgender supervisor.

Mahogany told The Chronicle that Dorsey's appointment was not a surprise. Though she made a "good faith effort" to convince the mayor that they could work well together, "this decision was clearly a very political one," Mahogany said.

She stressed her years of experience as a social worker as well as her tenure in Haney's office, where she worked to bring new housing to the district while supporting the arrival of community ambassadors to help improve street conditions.

"I have been doing the work for many years," Mahogany said. "I think that the voters of District Six will recognize that."

Haney said he would help ensure a smooth transition as Dorsey takes over the District Six office.

But for the November election, "every staff member, every volunteer, every possible resource I have will be at Honey's disposal," he said.

Dorsey has an early endorsement from state Sen. Scott Wiener, D-San Francisco. They've known each other since they began working together in the City Attorney's Office 20 years ago.

"He's smart, hardworking, deeply passionate and has lived experience that really speaks to some of our biggest challenges," Wiener said of Dorsey. "He takes the time to learn and not assume he knows everything."

Wiener said he has "a lot of respect" for Mahogany, whom he called a "talented person."

In addition to his work with the Police Department, Dorsey also worked to defeat a San Francisco ballot measure initially backed by Juul that would have overturned a local ordinance suspending the sale of electronic cigarettes. He is a former partner at Lighthouse Public Affairs and served for four years on the governing body of the San Francisco Democratic Party.

Addressing Crime / Safety tips

With the Covid-19 restrictions lifting in phases and many of us are starting to venture out again, here are some Package Theft Prevention Guide from SFSafe to help prevent your packages from being stolen.

PACKAGE THEFT PREVENTION GUIDE

WON'T BE HOME?
Use the "Hold Package" option at USPS.com to have packages held at location post office for pick up. You can also arrange for neighborhoods to pick up any packages that might be delivered.

USE SPECIAL SERVICES
Use USPS special services like Signature Confirmation or Registered Mail to add a layer of security.

REQUEST NONDESCRIPT PACKAGING
When completing your online order, opt for packaging that conceals the item or select the 'gift' option to ensure package arrives in a plain box especially when ordering from a high-end store.

NETWORK WITH NEIGHBORS
Neighborhood groups on social media or community apps can provide a system for reporting suspicious activity. This is also a good way to keep your deliveries and neighborhood secure.

PORCH AREA VISIBILITY
Keep the porch area clear and visible. The more likely a would-be thief is to be seen, the more likely they are to choose another target.

CUSTOMIZE DELIVERIES
Customize deliveries by adding specific delivery instructions using USPS.com and your tracking number. You can also schedule packages to arrive when you are home or reroute packages.

DELIVER TO SECURE LOCATIONS
Send packages to secure locations such as Amazon Lockers, FedEx and UPS locations, P.O. Boxes, and local post office.

USE MODERN ALTERNATIVES
Take advantage of contemporary options like smart lockers, lockboxes, cameras, motion detection lighting, alarms like Package Guard, and services like Doorman.

Addressing Crime / Safety tips

PREVENT GARAGE DOOR BREAK-INS

Garages can sometimes be the most vulnerable area of the home and they are often the entry point most targeted by thieves because of the easy access to the home. Here are some tips to help secure your garage and protect it from theft.

ALWAYS CLOSE YOUR GARAGE DOOR

This may seem obvious, but just drive through any residential neighborhood and you'll likely see a few wide-open garage doors. This is an invitation to burglars and at the very least, you're allowing passersby to easily view the contents of your garage.

INSTALL MOTION-SENSITIVE LIGHTS

Homes and garages with poor exterior lighting become more appealing targets for burglars. Ensure all entry points are well-lit. Constant lighting supplemented by motion sensitive lighting is best.

REINFORCE THE GLASS ON THE GARAGE DOOR

Add vinyl adhesive to reinforce garage windows. You can also opt for a frosted or translucent glass design to allow sunlight in while obscuring contents inside.

DON'T LEAVE GARAGE DOOR REMOTE IN YOUR CAR

A garage door remote is basically another key into your home and thieves won't hesitate to use it if they find it. Opt to use a remote on a keychain.

INSTALL AN INTERIOR MANUAL GARAGE DOOR LOCK

When leaving on a vacation or for extended periods of time, disconnect automatic door motor and install a manual lock.

TIE EMERGENCY RELEASE CORD

Tying your emergency release cord into a small ball will make it more difficult to reach by thieves who manage to break the garage windows.

INSTALL SURVEILLANCE CAMERAS

There should be at least 1 exterior mounted camera facing the street and registered with the D.A.'s office.

SECURE ANY VALUABLES

Keep all tools in cabinet systems with locks and be sure to hang and lock any bicycles. As much as possible, try to avoid keeping valuable items in the garage or inside vehicles.

HAVE A QUALITY, FUNCTIONING GARAGE DOOR

Garage doors should be as secure, sturdy, and well-built as your front door and should remain in good condition and tight fitting. Deadbolts should also be added to the garage-to-house door.

INSTALL INTERIOR MAIL SLOT HOOD COVER

If the garage door is equipped with a mail slot, a hood cover will prevent any view into the garage and its contents, eliminating enticement to enter.

SHARING THE ROAD WITH CYCLISTS

When it comes to safely sharing the road with cyclists, it's paramount for drivers to learn how to coexist.

Share the Road
When out and about, drivers need to be ever-mindful of sharing the road with cyclists.

Stay Off the Horn
Sudden hoking might startle a cyclist and can cause them to swerve into traffic or off the road.

Follow the 3 Foot Rule
Maintain a distance of 36 inches from cyclists whenever passing them. If possible, keep an even wider berth if there's bad weather or if in a higher speed limit zone.

Mind Your Blind Spots
Drivers should double-check their mirrors when changing lanes, making turns, and especially before opening their car door after parking.

Be Cautious with Kids
Kids can be unpredictable since their motor skills and decision-making faculties aren't fully developed. Be on alert when driving near schools and residential areas.

Be Patient
Don't tailgate a cyclist. When you need to pass one, patiently wait until it's safe to do so.

Other Dangerous Weapon	13

Kansas v. Glover (2020) 140 S.Ct. 1183.

A Kansas deputy sheriff ran a license plate check on a truck and discovered that the registered owner had a revoked driver's license. The deputy assumed the registered owner was driving the vehicle and pulled it over. The registered owner, Glover, was in fact driving and charged with being a habitual offender. Thereafter, Glover moved to suppress the evidence, claiming that the deputy lacked reasonable suspicion to detain him.

The United States Supreme Court held that, "when the officer lacks information negating an inference that the owner is the driver of the vehicle, the stop is reasonable." The Court noted that the Fourth Amendment permits an officer to detain an individual when that officer has a "particularized and objective basis for suspecting the particular person stopped of criminal activity." Officers must be permitted to make commonsense judgements and inferences regarding human behavior. The Court found that prior to pulling the vehicle over, the deputy observed an individual operating the vehicle, he knew the registered owner had a revoked license, and the model of the vehicle matched what he observed. From these facts the deputy drew the commonsense inference that the driver was the registered owner and the Court found that provided more than reasonable suspicion to initiate the traffic stop.

People v. Henderson (2020) 9 Cal.5th 1013

Henderson was convicted of first degree murder with special circumstances, the personal use of a deadly weapon, and sentenced to death which triggered an automatic appeal to the California Supreme Court. Following his arrest, and during a custodial interrogation, Henderson initially waived his Miranda rights. When asked if he was present at the scene of the crime, Henderson stated, "Uhm, there's some things that I, uhm, want uh …" He was again asked if he was present and Henderson continued, "[want] uh, want to speak to an attorney first, because I, I take responsibility for me, but there's other people that…"

Under established Miranda law, officers must terminate a custodial interrogation of a suspect when that individual invokes their right to counsel or to be silent. That being said, "various cases have held that a suspect's use of equivocal words or phrases does not constitute a clear request for counsel." A suspect must unambiguously assert his right to counsel or to remain silent. Courts objectively look to whether the suspect expressed their desire for counsel with sufficient clarity "that a reasonable police officer in the circumstances would understand the statement to be a request for an attorney." Courts have found the following statements to be equivocal and not an invocation: "maybe I should talk to a lawyer;" "[i]f you can bring me a lawyer;" "I think it'd probably be a good idea for me to get an attorney." In this case the court found that by stating, "[I] want to, speak to an attorney first," Henderson did not use equivocal language and the California Supreme Court found this was a violation of the Fifth Amendment.

SFPD Requesting Public's Assistance in Finding Assault Suspect

On Saturday, May 7, 2022, San Francisco Police Department officers responded to a report of an assault that occurred at approximately 3:13 p.m. at Desmond St. and Sunnydale Ave. Officers arrived on scene and met with the female victim who stated that she was walking by herself at Sunnydale Ave. and Bayshore Blvd. when she saw an unknown male yelling incoherent statements and acting erratic. The victim attempted to cross the street to avoid the male, but the male appeared to follow her. The victim felt unsafe of the situation, so she turned around to get away from the male.

As the victim was walking away from the male, the male grabbed her. The suspect then put his hand on the victim's neck and began squeezing her throat, which prevented her from breathing. The suspect continued to assault the victim by pushing her to the ground and yelling incoherent statements. The suspect continued to strangle the victim while he was on top of her as she struggled to get him off, which caused her to lose consciousness. During the attack the victim heard someone's voice call out. The suspect stood up from the victim and fled from the scene. The suspect fled on foot toward Sunnydale Ave. and Bayshore where a witness lost sight of him. Responding officers searched the area for the suspect to no avail. Medics arrived on scene who treated the victim for her injuries.

The suspect is described as a male, between the ages of 25 and 29 years-old, approximately 5 feet 11 inches tall, 150 lbs., black hair, and last seen wearing a black jacket and black pants. Please refer to the attached images for further suspect description.

SFPD Investigators are requesting the public's assistance in finding this assault suspect. Anyone with information is asked to contact the SFPD at 1-415-575-4444 or Text a Tip to TIP411 and begin the message with SFPD.

CPAB– Project Updates

February 2021

Community Police Advisory Board (CPAB) "CPABs" are community-oriented police advisory boards for each police district. Each CPAB, led by the District Captain for that police district, is comprised of approximately 10 to 15 committed volunteer community members and a representative from the Community Engagement Division of the SFPD. District Captains may choose more members if they wish to accomplish specific tasks. Each district's Board members live and/or work in the communities within that district, where a community may be either a neighborhood with specific needs or a specific demographic. Each member thus represents the diversity of their community. In addition to the district CPABs, there will also be a City-wide CPAB Steering Committee facilitated by SF Safety Awareness For Everyone (SAFE). Two representatives from each Community Police Advisory Board shall be selected to participate in this Committee, with the purpose of sharing information across districts.

Captain Falvey held his monthly CPAB meeting on 02/09. Time was spent discussing upcoming community events.

Station / Department Vision and Values

A guiding principle of the San Francisco Police Department is its commitment to treating all people with dignity, fairness, and respect. It is crucial for our members to carry out their duties in a manner free from bias and eliminate any perception of policing that appears biased. Biased policing is unsafe, unjust, and ineffective. It also alienates the public, fosters distrust of police, and undermines legitimate law enforcement efforts.

The SFPD is dedicated to ensuring our officers and professional staff provide unbiased, quality service to the diverse communities we work for. Our goal is to provide fair and positive interactions between San Francisco officers and the people we are proud to serve.

Addressing Crime / Safety tips

With the Covid-19 restrictions lifting in phases and many of us are starting to venture out again, here are some Package Theft Prevention Guide from SFSafe to help prevent your packages from being stolen.

PACKAGE THEFT PREVENTION GUIDE

WON'T BE HOME?
Use the "Hold Package" option at USPS.com to have packages held at location post office for pick up. You can also arrange for neighborhoods to pick up any packages that might be delivered.

USE SPECIAL SERVICES
Use USPS special services like Signature Confirmation or Registered Mail to add a layer of security.

REQUEST NONDESCRIPT PACKAGING
When completing your online order, opt for packaging that conceals the item or select the 'gift' option to ensure package arrives in a plain box especially when ordering from a high-end store.

NETWORK WITH NEIGHBORS
Neighborhood groups on social media or community apps can provide a system for reporting suspicious activity. This is also a good way to keep your deliveries and neighborhood secure.

PORCH AREA VISIBILITY
Keep the porch area clear and visible. The more likely a would-be thief is to be seen, the more likely they are to choose another target.

CUSTOMIZE DELIVERIES
Customize deliveries by adding specific delivery instructions using USPS.com and your tracking number. You can also schedule packages to arrive when you are home or reroute packages.

DELIVER TO SECURE LOCATIONS
Send packages to secure locations such as Amazon Lockers, FedEx and UPS locations, P.O. Boxes, and local post office.

USE MODERN ALTERNATIVES
Take advantage of contemporary options like smart lockers, lockboxes, cameras, motion detection lighting, alarms like Package Guard, and services like Doorman.

Addressing Crime / Safety tips

PREVENT GARAGE DOOR BREAK-INS

Garages can sometimes be the most vulnerable area of the home and they are often the entry point most targeted by thieves because of the easy access to the home. Here are some tips to help secure your garage and protect it from theft.

ALWAYS CLOSE YOUR GARAGE DOOR

This may seem obvious, but just drive through any residential neighborhood and you'll likely see a few wide-open garage doors. This is an invitation to burglars and at the very least, you're allowing passersby to easily view the contents of your garage.

INSTALL MOTION-SENSITIVE LIGHTS

Homes and garages with poor exterior lighting become more appealing targets for burglars. Ensure all entry points are well-lit. Constant lighting supplemented by motion sensitive lighting is best.

REINFORCE THE GLASS ON THE GARAGE DOOR

Add vinyl adhesive to reinforce garage windows. You can also opt for a frosted or translucent glass design to allow sunlight in while obscuring contents inside.

DON'T LEAVE GARAGE DOOR REMOTE IN YOUR CAR

A garage door remote is basically another key into your home and thieves won't hesitate to use it if they find it. Opt to use a remote on a keychain.

INSTALL AN INTERIOR MANUAL GARAGE DOOR LOCK

When leaving on a vacation or for extended periods of time, disconnect automatic door motor and install a manual lock.

TIE EMERGENCY RELEASE CORD

Tying your emergency release cord into a small ball will make it more difficult to reach by thieves who manage to break the garage windows.

INSTALL SURVEILLANCE CAMERAS

There should be at least 1 exterior mounted camera facing the street and registered with the D.A.'s office.

SECURE ANY VALUABLES

Keep all tools in cabinet systems with locks and be sure to hang and lock any bicycles. As much as possible, try to avoid keeping valuable items in the garage or inside vehicles.

HAVE A QUALITY, FUNCTIONING GARAGE DOOR

Garage doors should be as secure, sturdy, and well-built as your front door and should remain in good condition and tight fitting. Deadbolts should also be added to the garage-to-house door.

INSTALL INTERIOR MAIL SLOT HOOD COVER

If the garage door is equipped with a mail slot, a hood cover will prevent any view into the garage and its contents, eliminating enticement to enter.

SHARING THE ROAD WITH CYCLISTS

When it comes to safely sharing the road with cyclists, it's paramount for drivers to learn how to coexist.

Share the Road
When out and about, drivers need to be ever-mindful of sharing the road with cyclists.

Stay Off the Horn
Sudden hoking might startle a cyclist and can cause them to swerve into traffic or off the road.

Follow the 3 Foot Rule
Maintain a distance of 36 inches from cyclists whenever passing them. If possible, keep an even wider berth if there's bad weather or if in a higher speed limit zone.

Mind Your Blind Spots
Drivers should double-check their mirrors when changing lanes, making turns, and especially before opening their car door after parking.

Be Cautious with Kids
Kids can be unpredictable since their motor skills and decision-making faculties aren't fully developed. Be on alert when driving near schools and residential areas.

Be Patient
Don't tailgate a cyclist. When you need to pass one, patiently wait until it's safe to do so.

Kansas v. Glover (2020) 140 S.Ct. 1183.

A Kansas deputy sheriff ran a license plate check on a truck and discovered that the registered owner had a revoked driver's license. The deputy assumed the registered owner was driving the vehicle and pulled it over. The registered owner, Glover, was in fact driving and charged with being a habitual offender. Thereafter, Glover moved to suppress the evidence, claiming that the deputy lacked reasonable suspicion to detain him.

The United States Supreme Court held that, "when the officer lacks information negating an inference that the owner is the driver of the vehicle, the stop is reasonable." The Court noted that the Fourth Amendment permits an officer to detain an individual when that officer has a "particularized and objective basis for suspecting the particular person stopped of criminal activity." Officers must be permitted to make commonsense judgements and inferences regarding human behavior. The Court found that prior to pulling the vehicle over, the deputy observed an individual operating the vehicle, he knew the registered owner had a revoked license, and the model of the vehicle matched what he observed. From these facts the deputy drew the commonsense inference that the driver was the registered owner and the Court found that provided more than reasonable suspicion to initiate the traffic stop.

People v. Henderson (2020) 9 Cal.5th 1013

Henderson was convicted of first degree murder with special circumstances, the personal use of a deadly weapon, and sentenced to death which triggered an automatic appeal to the California Supreme Court. Following his arrest, and during a custodial interrogation, Henderson initially waived his Miranda rights. When asked if he was present at the scene of the crime, Henderson stated, "Uhm, there's some things that I, uhm, want uh …" He was again asked if he was present and Henderson continued, "[want] uh, want to speak to an attorney first, because I, I take responsibility for me, but there's other people that…"

Under established Miranda law, officers must terminate a custodial interrogation of a suspect when that individual invokes their right to counsel or to be silent. That being said, "various cases have held that a suspect's use of equivocal words or phrases does not constitute a clear request for counsel." A suspect must unambiguously assert his right to counsel or to remain silent. Courts objectively look to whether the suspect expressed their desire for counsel with sufficient clarity "that a reasonable police officer in the circumstances would understand the statement to be a request for an attorney." Courts have found the following statements to be equivocal and not an invocation: "maybe I should talk to a lawyer;" "[i]f you can bring me a lawyer;" "I think it'd probably be a good idea for me to get an attorney." In this case the court found that by stating, "[I] want to, speak to an attorney first," Henderson did not use equivocal language and the California Supreme Court found this was a violation of the Fifth Amendment.

SFPD Requesting Public's Assistance in Finding Assault Suspect

On Saturday, May 7, 2022, San Francisco Police Department officers responded to a report of an assault that occurred at approximately 3:13 p.m. at Desmond St. and Sunnydale Ave. Officers arrived on scene and met with the female victim who stated that she was walking by herself at Sunnydale Ave. and Bayshore Blvd. when she saw an unknown male yelling incoherent statements and acting erratic. The victim attempted to cross the street to avoid the male, but the male appeared to follow her. The victim felt unsafe of the situation, so she turned around to get away from the male.

As the victim was walking away from the male, the male grabbed her. The suspect then put his hand on the victim's neck and began squeezing her throat, which prevented her from breathing. The suspect continued to assault the victim by pushing her to the ground and yelling incoherent statements. The suspect continued to strangle the victim while he was on top of her as she struggled to get him off, which caused her to lose consciousness. During the attack the victim heard someone's voice call out. The suspect stood up from the victim and fled from the scene. The suspect fled on foot toward Sunnydale Ave. and Bayshore where a witness lost sight of him. Responding officers searched the area for the suspect to no avail. Medics arrived on scene who treated the victim for her injuries.

The suspect is described as a male, between the ages of 25 and 29 years-old, approximately 5 feet 11 inches tall, 150 lbs., black hair, and last seen wearing a black jacket and black pants. Please refer to the attached images for further suspect description.

SFPD Investigators are requesting the public's assistance in finding this assault suspect. Anyone with information is asked to contact the SFPD at 1-415-575-4444 or Text a Tip to TIP411 and begin the message with SFPD.

CPAB– Project Updates

February 2021

Community Police Advisory Board (CPAB) "CPABs" are community-oriented police advisory boards for each police district. Each CPAB, led by the District Captain for that police district, is comprised of approximately 10 to 15 committed volunteer community members and a representative from the Community Engagement Division of the SFPD. District Captains may choose more members if they wish to accomplish specific tasks. Each district's Board members live and/or work in the communities within that district, where a community may be either a neighborhood with specific needs or a specific demographic. Each member thus represents the diversity of their community. In addition to the district CPABs, there will also be a City-wide CPAB Steering Committee facilitated by SF Safety Awareness For Everyone (SAFE). Two representatives from each Community Police Advisory Board shall be selected to participate in this Committee, with the purpose of sharing information across districts.

Captain Falvey held his monthly CPAB meeting on 02/09. Time was spent discussing upcoming community events.

Station / Department Vision and Values

A guiding principle of the San Francisco Police Department is its commitment to treating all people with dignity, fairness, and respect. It is crucial for our members to carry out their duties in a manner free from bias and eliminate any perception of policing that appears biased. Biased policing is unsafe, unjust, and ineffective. It also alienates the public, fosters distrust of police, and undermines legitimate law enforcement efforts.

The SFPD is dedicated to ensuring our officers and professional staff provide unbiased, quality service to the diverse communities we work for. Our goal is to provide fair and positive interactions between San Francisco officers and the people we are proud to serve.
