7. Update on Generative AI Planning

Katharine Petrucione provided an overview of the generative AI landscape including practical guidelines gathered by the City Administrator's Office and next steps for the City from the Mayor's Office.

Committee members made the following comments:

- The guidelines are intended to be broad enough to be applicable to all departments, with flexibility to be applied within specific department use cases.
- There is no AI Division, or a central place for coordination, so this will require a collective effort.
- Contracts Administration and City Attorney are looking at what should be included in contracts, and what already exists, such as clauses on how vendors cannot use city data to train their models and must disclose if their product uses AI.

Committee members made the following suggestions:

- Create a subcommittee under COIT on AI, including subject matter experts from each department
- Ensure that leadership and directors are included in trainings and communications
- Place a high emphasis on training for staff, potentially collaborating with City College of San Francisco

David Pilpel suggested looking at how AI might interface with public record retention and classification.
