6. Review Surveillance Technology Policy - Multiple Departments - Social Media Monitoring Technology (Action Item)

Julia Chrusciel presented on a Social Media Monitoring Surveillance Technology Policy and Surveillance Impact Report on behalf of multiple City Departments.

The following was recommended by members:

- Include language on “print media”, in tangent with digital media
- Consider narrowing the definition of “cost” to the administration of technology rather than the use of technology

Sophia Kittler, Kate Howard, and Calvin Yan asked the following questions:

- How does social media monitoring technology differ from using search engines, such as Google?
- If a department personnel recalls a message on social media, can they look up that information without being in violation of this policy?
- If other departments wanted to use social media monitoring technology in the future, how would they be added?
- In Appendix A, why do some departments have personnel costs, but no software cost?

During public comment, David Pilpel asked if there was an opportunity to limit the list of program options to avoid dealing with conflicting policies. He recommended that COIT staff be consistent with the use of job classifications for who has access to social media monitoring technology, and stated that the implications of the use of AI and other technology has not been addressed by the committee.

Sophia Kittler initiated a motion to move the policy forward with the amended language on the environment clause, Michael Makstman seconded.
